REMARKABLE FILM SENSATION,
"OVER THE HILL," TO BE SEEN HERE.

"Over the Hill," the William Fox picturization of one of Will Carleton's "Farm Ballads," which broke the best record of any screen attraction that ever visited Broadway, playing there one solid year in six different theatres, will be seen at The Garden Theatre, Rockingham, September 13th and 14th.

The story of "Over the Hill" was adapted from Carleton's poems by Paul H. Sloane, who wrote a screen story that has defied criticism in this form of entertainment. The story has to do with the adversities of a typical American family, the mother of which is called upon to bear the brunt of all the shortcomings of her little flock. The principal characters, aside from the mother, are a lazy father and six lively kids—one of whom is destined to figure as the "black sheep." As the story unfolds, the youngsters are seen growing to manhood and womanhood, and eventually leaving the homestead to set out into the world for themselves.

The story is worked up to one of the most beautiful climaxes ever devised and one that is said to stir the emotions of men and women as they never before have been stirred by a stage presentation. There is also abundant comedy in the picture and the production can well be said to meet the entertainment needs of every member of any family, young and old.

BUILD A BUILDING.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The schools will open September 18th, and many of the children have defective vision. It is very unwise to send your child to school without looking after this important matter.

Those having trouble of this kind will do well to confer with me regarding their children's eyes (and your own as to that). I have experience, and have been doing satisfactory work in Rockingham for the last ten and more years, and prices have been greatly reduced. If you come to me you will find that the prices are much lower than have been the case before these prices took effect September 1st.

Parents, give your child a chance, and bring the children to me for eye examination. My office is over the McNair Clothing Store.

I can do your refracting as well as you can get it done anywhere. Come to see me. You will find prices right, IN KEEPING WITH THE TIMES!

Here's the golden text for today:
See "Monte Cristo" if you have to mortgage the old homestead.

You can buy a house any day, but it's only once in a twelvemonth that you have a chance to see a picture like this—one that delivers a succession of dramatic knockouts without mauling your intelligence at the same time.

It's really a little hard to write about "Monte Cristo" without getting maudlin in praise. It is such a relief from the stodgy, unimaginative stuff that makes up our ordinary cinema fare. The same man who directed this—Emmett J. Flynn—has done some mighty good pictures before, but in "Monte Cristo" he has got on a new plane.

We can't tell you all about it between here and the bottom of the page. Let's say, then, that it is superior in every aspect of the celluloid art, and then single out for special attention the two ways in which it most excels—its economy of film and the beauty of its scenes.

As for No. 1:
The moving pictures have too often squandered yards and yards of film on material that required only inches. They have floundered around with lots of inconsequential business which has obscured the real plots and padded and encumbered the weak ones.

But the producer of "Monte Cristo" has got the creation story idea. He had to have to get Dumas novel into a moving picture. Every flicker advances the plot. Not six feet of film in the entire production are wasted. And this economy is not effected at the expense of good continuity. Flynn and whoever edited the film have merely shown an extraordinary gift for leaving out the nonessential.

Health and the School

As the time is drawing near for the opening of the schools in Rockingham county and there are quite a number of cases of whooping cough and diphtheria in the county, I wish to impress upon all the people of the county the necessity for doing everything in their power to prevent the further spread of these and other infectious and contagious diseases. As the schools open and the children are brought in contact with each other in great numbers, the chances for exposure to disease is much increased, so we readily see the importance of allowing no child which has symptoms of a contagious disease to enter school until such child has been examined by a physician and presents a certificate stating that such child has no contagious disease.

One child suffering with whooping cough, remaining in a school room for a short time will probably transmit the disease to every child in the room that has not had the disease. It is true it is unfortunate for a child to lose the time from school because of sickness, but it is much better for it to do so rather than to keep going for a while and causing many others to be sick and lose time from school, and possibly their lives.

We often hear parents say children have to have whooping cough sometime and the sooner the better, but I desire to say this is a mistaken idea, for the older a child becomes the stronger it is and he is more able to withstand the disease. Most children that die from whooping cough are under five years of age. Very few children over five years of age die from this disease, so we can readily see the importance of preventing the spread of the disease and, in this way, save the children from exposure.

We now have a vaccine which, if given to children, lessens the danger of contracting the disease. This is not an absolute preventative in every case, but if it does not prevent it entirely it will cause the attack to be of a more mild form. After a child has developed whooping cough the vaccine will, in some cases, cure it and if it fails to cure the disease it will make it run a milder course and lessen the danger of complications that some time accompany the disease.

In regard to diphtheria, every child from the age of six months to six years should be given three doses of toxin anti-toxin, which immunizes the child from diphtheria, one of the most dangerous diseases which children are subject to. For full details in regard to this toxin anti-toxin, I advise every parent who has young children to consult their family physician, who will be glad to give them full details in regard to this treatment.

No child suffering from a sore throat should be allowed to attend school until it presents a certificate from a doctor stating that it has no symptoms of diphtheria. By everybody co-operating and complying with the quarantine laws, we should be able to prevent, to a very great extent, the further spread of those diseases. The law requires every teacher to report to the quarantine officer every case of any of the reportable diseases, which he or she knows about in their school district. It also requires every parent or householder to report every case in their home about whom no physician has been consulted. Each physician is required to report every case about which he has been consulted. I feel sure that all will take an interest in this work of preventing disease and much good will be accomplished and many lives be saved by our efforts.

Respectfully yours,
DR. W. R. MCINTOSH,
County Quarantine Officer.
